Thinking is Making Martin Herbert,Fiona MacDonald,Matilda Strang,2013 The sculptural object has spent much of the recent past being made to disappear from view The word sculpture might still carry connotations of weight scale and material yet none of these things may necessarily be present in any particular work Whether lost into a void left behind in an expanded field or exploded to occupy the architectural space that once simply contained it the sculptural object as the flotsam of an artist s engagement with process and materials seems to have been in a continual state of crisis since first becoming detached from its plinth As for the sculptor the artist as maker they can often be seen performing as magician orchestrating events and actions which culminate in the object of our desire the decorative assistant simply vanishing from the stage This book questions both the presence and absence of the object and its maker within contemporary British sculpture

The Knowledge Illusion Steven Sloman, Philip Fernbach, 2017-03-14 The Knowledge Illusion is filled with insights on how we should deal with our individual ignorance and collective wisdom Steven Pinker We all think we know more than we actually do Humans have built hugely complex societies and technologies but most of us don't even know how a pen or a toilet works How have we achieved so much despite understanding so little Cognitive scientists Steven Sloman and Philip Fernbach argue that we survive and thrive despite our mental shortcomings because we live in a rich community of knowledge The key to our intelligence lies in the people and things around us We're constantly drawing on information and expertise stored outside our heads in our bodies our environment our possessions and the community with which we interact and usually we don't even realize we're doing it The human mind is both brilliant and pathetic We have mastered fire created democratic institutions stood on the moon and sequenced our genome And yet each of us is error prone sometimes irrational and often ignorant The fundamentally communal nature of intelligence and knowledge explains why we often assume we know more than we really do why political opinions and false beliefs are so hard to change and why individual oriented approaches to education and management frequently fail But our collaborative minds also enable us to do amazing things The Knowledge Illusion contends that true genius can be found in the ways we create intelligence using the community around us
